

Obtaining of Portuguese Nationality by Sephardic origin

1

Historical reasons for the Portuguese Nationality Law.

The designation of the Sephardic Jews refers to the descendants of the traditional Jewish communities of the Iberian Peninsula. The presence of these communities in the peninsula has its beginning even before the formation of the Iberian Christian kingdoms, as is the case of Portugal.

After the Edict of the Alhambra in 1492, these communities were persecuted by the Spanish Inquisition and many of its members took refuge in Portugal, who in 1496 were also expelled from that country.

The Law nº 37/81 of October 3rd "Nationality Law" and the Decree Law nº 237ª/2006 of December 14th "Regulamento da Nacionalidade Portuguesa", updated by DL 43/2013, DL 30-A/2015 and DL 71/2017, which have as main objective to recognize the Portuguese nationality to those persons who prove their Portuguese Sephardic origin and the procedure to follow, describe the process and steps to complete the procedure successfully. In essence, the law reflects the same spirit of the Spanish legislation whose deadline expired last October 2019.
